PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

A whetstone is an instrument used by woodsmen to sharpen axes when they become dull and blunt.

The State Medical Society may be likened unto a whetstone, designed to sharpen our wits when they become somewhat dull and sluggish. An axe is unlike the wit, in that it becomes dull from continued use, while our wits become dull from the lack of use.

We are living in a period when necessity is calling for the use of every scientific thing there is within us, including those that lie dormant as well as active. We can arouse these dormant percepts by affiliation, direct contact, and through the exchange of ideas and thoughts. The man who shuts himself up within himself, automatically stagnates and fails to render the type of service the world demands. We believe that those of us who are most serviceable to our respective communities, are the zealous workers who make sacrifices to keep abreast with the times.

Every professional man who has his patient's interest at heart, strives to give him the best that can be had in a therapeutic way, and so he takes advantage of all that the medical world has to offer. Let us be fair and honest to our patients; we owe it to them.

Allow me to solicit your hearty cooperation in trying to make this the greatest year in the history of our organization. Make yourself a committee of one to see that nothing stands between you and your State Meeting at Durham this year. We need you and you may need us. So, come one, come all. We shall be glad to meet you there. Come! Let's whet up.

Your humble servant,

J. H. PITTMAN, President.
